This exam paper has four tasks. Complete all tasks.

Task 1 – Long reading

Read the following text about film industries and answer the 15 questions on page 3.

Paragraph 1

Where is the world's biggest film industry? Most people would probably guess that it's the United States, or Hollywood. It's usual to think that the large American film companies, with all the money they have, have spread all over the world and destroyed local film industries. The fact is, though, that the real situation is quite different. Film industries around the world are very much alive.

Paragraph 2

The answer to the question depends partly on what we mean by "biggest". There are actually several possible answers, and some would surprise a lot of people. If we're talking about how many films different countries make, there is definitely one clear winner. The number of films made in India is far greater than any other country, and seems to rise every year. Most people have heard of Bollywood, which took its name from the the centre of film-making, Bombay (now called Mumbai). But in fact there are nine different regions producing their own films in sixteen different languages.

Paragraph 3

America isn't even the country that makes the second highest number of films. In fact, it's Nigeria in West Africa, which produces nearly 50 films every week. Nigeria has made films since the 1960s, but the growth of cheaper technology has now made its film industry into the second biggest employer in the country after the government.

Paragraph 4

If we look at the amount of money that the films earn, however, the U.S.A. does come out on top, followed by China (which replaced Japan in second place in 2013). One reason for this is, of course, the very large audience for Chinese films, at home and internationally. There is also the fact that, to help their film industry, the Chinese government has put a limit of 20 per year on the number of new foreign films that cinemas can show.

Paragraph 5

Local film industries, in fact, are growing almost everywhere, from Iran to South America and from Egypt to Vietnam. They may not be as large as, for example, Nigeria, but the same cheaper film-making technology now available makes it possible for them to keep going and do well. Everywhere you look, it seems, local film industries are managing to fight back against the spread of American-made "international" film entertainment.

Questions 1-5

Task 2 – Multi-text reading

In this section there are four short texts for you to read and some questions for you to answer.

Questions 16-20

Read questions 16-20 first and then read texts A, B, C and D below the questions.

As you read each text, decide which text each question refers to. Choose one letter – A, B, C or D – and write it on the lines below. You can use any letter more than once.

Which text:

16. reports on the most common problems in language learning?

17. gives suggestions on language learning using technology?

18. gives the reasons for foreign language learning?

19. discusses the type of people who learn languages?

20. offers advice on improving speaking and listening skills?

Text A

To: sara@email.com
From: cathy@email.co.uk
Subject: Languages
Hi Sara You asked me for some advice about learning a new language. As you know I have learnt a couple of foreign languages so I am a good person to ask! First of all I think you should try to attend a class rather than doing a course online. You need to try and use the language by talking to others. If you go to a class you can practise by chatting with other students. I also think you can watch films or listen to music and songs in the language you're learning, then you will start to understand more when you hear the language. Good luck! Cathy

Text B

Our language course
	Sara: I'm finding our French language course really challenging. Is anybody else?
	Pablo: Me, too! The grammar is quite hard.
	George: @Sara & Pablo Why don't you use the internet to help you? I've found lots of websites with fun practice activities for both grammar and vocabulary.
	Lori: I agree with George. I also exchange emails with people who have French as their first language. It's a good way to improve. Why don't you try it?
	Sara: @Lori Good idea!

Text C

Many people first experience learning a foreign language at school. In other words, they have no choice about learning a new language. This is when some people realise they enjoy language learning and may continue to learn that language, or other different languages, as a hobby when they are still at school or even after they leave.

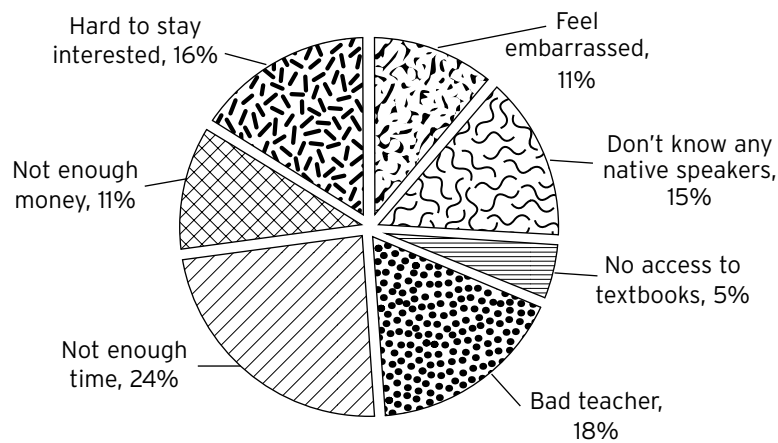

Nowadays, it is far more common for people to go abroad to work or study for a temporary period of time. In that case they may need to learn a new language. People who make a permanent move to other countries to live may also need to learn the language of that country.

The number of people travelling and taking holidays in other countries has also increased in the last fifty years. Many people want to be able to communicate, if only in a basic way with the local people they will meet when on international holidays.

Worldwide business has also made many people learn at least one new language, so they can communicate with other business people and customers abroad.

Text D

Main difficulty when learning a new language
